UNEMPLOYMENT: Government To Blame

AS UNEMPLOYMENT CLIMBS above 3 million, the press campaign to shift the blame from the government leaders who are in fact responsible onto the unfortunate victims of Tory policies, has been stepped up. Day after day the papers are full of headlines such as "Get the Scroungers" in the Daily Express and "Britain's army of dole-queue swindlers" in the Daily Mirror.

That such hysterical claims are groundless is shown by the latest government figures which revealed that, out of 4,384,000 Unemployment Benefit claims, frauds accounted for a tiny 0.42% of the total. In 1977-78 over £14,200 million was paid out in social security benefits, but fraud amounted to only £4 million. A small sum considering that more than £28 million is written off each year by the Inland Revenue as tax illegally unpaid and not worth the cost of recovery. Millions more are lost in tax avoidance fiddles such as the one by the Vesty family, who own the Dewhurst butchers shops, and last year paid only £10 tax on profits of over £4 million.

Of course, racial nationalists condemn all corruption at the expense of the nation, but we refuse to join in the divisive Tory campaign to blame the unemployed and working people in general for Britain's economic troubles. The recession is the result of the government's reaction to the world crisis of Capitalism, caused by overproduction and the ever-growing burden of debt-interest.

Any other suggestion is simply a propaganda smokescreen to hide the Establishment's failure to put the interests of the British people before those of Big Business and Finance.

IMMIGRANTS AND IMMIGRATION

EX-SOLDIER FORCED TO LIVE IN SLUM

ASIAN LANDLORD ROBS OLD PEOPLE

SIXTY-THREE year old ex-soldier William Booth is just one of dozens of people (mainly OAP's, disabled or unemployed) who 'live' in appalling slums and pay anything from £10-£16 per week to a landlord in Glasgow.

William's single room has a hole in the roof through which rain just pours in. He has to share his cooker and sink with five other 'tenants', who also 'live' in equally horrific conditions.

However, there will be no World in Action programmes on William's plight, nor any John Pilger special report in the Daily Mirror exposing the landlords.

Perhaps this has something to do with the fact that the landlords are Pakistanis, Rashid Mir and his wife Azra. Mir – a Tory supporter – collects the 'rent' by waiting outside the Post Office whilst his 'tenants' collect their Social Security or OAP.

If any of his 'tenants' complain, they are thrown out onto the street, as in the case of one 73 year old man.

So in today's capitalist Britain, ex-soldiers 'live' in slums, so that Tory-supporting Pakistanis can live it up.

BANKERS HELP BLACKS

SENIOR figures in banking, insurance, building societies and pension funds have agreed to help Immigrant inner city areas.

The pledge came after the leaders of 29 financial institutions were given a guided tour of Toxteth and other riot-torn areas of Merseyside by top Tory minister Michael Heseltine.

They were each asked to make one of their best managers available to the Government for a year – at the firm's expense – to help to decide what should be done for the inner city areas. After the tour Mr. Heseltine said "there was a ready acknowledgement that such an initiative would be worthwile".

In fact, the experience of far wealthier America makes it clear that no amount of money and urban aid programmes can 'buy off' the Blacks. But there is no doubt that the giant financial institutions will continue in their vain attempt to prop up the multi-racial society. They know only too well that out of its wreckage will arise a Racial Nationalist state in which their corrupt financial system has no more place than the negro.

"British are snobs"

MOST of the British race are snobs, say the public school boys of Eton!

A front page article in a recent issue of the Eton College Chronicle, which is run by the pupils, says the 'vast majority' have an un-justified sense of superiority and an in-built contempt for foreigners. They go on to say that this attitude "can help to create racial hatred".

This sickening article by the sons of 'upper' classes illustrates the degenerate state of the wealthier sections of the British population. These snotty nosed public schoolboys, whose daddies pay more than £70 a week in school fees alone, are in no position to lecture the White working class on what their attitude to immigrants should be. They, unlike the less fortunate inner city dwellers, live in cozy surroundings miles from the multi-racial hell-holes that much of Britain has become. These sons of the rich know nothing of the problems of mugging, unemployment and Black racial violence!

Further evidence of the decadence of the monied classes came with the disclosure that there are an estimated 5,000 White Muslims in Britain. Not surprisingly, the vast majority of these racial degenerates, according to a recent BBC documentary, are "professional people" who are "affluent and articulate".

T.V. BOSSES BAN THE KLAN

THE HEADS of Britain's T.V. network censor their broadcasts to stop any programmes which might encourage "racialism".

This was admitted by the Daily Mail when it explained why the film 'The Klansman' was replaced at short notice by another film. 'The Klansman', starring Richard Burton and Lee Marvin is, of course, hostile to White racists and the Klan, but the programme controllers are not sure that it shows them in a bad enough light.

As a result, said the Mail, the film "has been sitting in I.T.V.'s cupboard for 2 years, waiting for a non-riotous spell in Britain's cities so that it can be trundled out".

On that basis, while our T.V. screens are full of rubbish about brave Black detectives and brilliant negro brain-surgeons, it may be some time before we see 'The Klansman'.

ECONOMIC AND SOCIAL

EDUCATION CUTS THREATEN VILLAGE COMMUNITIES

THE TORY education cuts are hitting the teaching profession very hard. Already many teaching jobs have been axed by Mark Carisle, former education secretary, and pupil-teacher ratios continue to deteriorate.

Now a confidential report reveals that a further 10,000 teachers face redundancy over the next two and a half years. These further Government cuts merely confirm what has been obvious for some time: that the Tories are tearing our education system to pieces.

However, a closer look at the exact nature of the cuts in educational services reveals some very harmful and disconcerting trends which will lead to far more than just the loss of jobs and the deterioration of pupil-teacher ratios.

Mark Carlisle and the civil service bureaucrats in Whitehall are demanding that nearly 1,000 of the country's 28,000 schools should be closed by 1984. This of course is inexcusable in itself, leading as it does to even lower standards. But it is the type of schools that are going to be closed which is the really worrying feature of these latest cuts.

The schools most threatened are those in rural and semi-rural communities. These schools are small in size, but they are absolutely crucial to the very survival of the communities which they serve. One such example of a small rural school which faces closure in the latest round of cuts is the 22-pupil Fir Tree primary school, 600ft up on the edge of the Pennines in Upper Weardale.

Fir Tree is a 90-year-old village school that employs two teachers, including the head, and a part-timer. Its 22 pupils – who will increase to 30 next September – get virtually individual attention and the atmosphere is like that of a large family.

A parents' action committee has been formed at Fir Tree which is dedicated to saving the school. Harry French, the action committee chairman, explains how the closure of the school will have some very damaging effects on the life of the village: "When the local school is closed, tiny villages become filled with old people. The children will have to get up early and travel three miles away in the dark.

"Many people moved here because it has a village school and they thought that was the right environment in which to bring up their children."

So the closure of small village schools like Fir Tree and the hundreds of others like it will force many young couples to move to the urban conurbations, leaving Britain's villages populated by old people. Thus more and more rural communities, having no new generations of young people to infuse life into the local areas, will effectively die.

The rural way of life is a traditional and healthy part of Britain's national and social character. That way of life is under threat from the Tory cuts; hundreds of other village schools are facing closure in Norfolk, Dorset and Shropshire to name but a few places. This wholesale slaughter of small village schools and the subsequent stagnation of the rural communities which depend upon them must be abated. We must not allow the healthy and traditional rural mode of life to be murdered by the Tory axemen.

NO PAY LIMIT FOR BOSSES

THE GOVERNMENT, Big Business and the CBI are always telling us that workers who demand wage rises are guilty of causing inflation and pricing themselves out of jobs.

The Government has now set a 4% limit for pay rises in the public sector. Some managements of large firms and bosses of nationalised industries have blackmailed their workforces into accepting pay freezes, and in some cases pay cuts, with the threat of redundancies.

But do MP's or the bosses of Big Business practise pay restraint themselves? Do they have to exist on low incomes?

The answer is no. Back in June MP's voted virtually unanimously to give themselves an 18.7% pay increase, raising their salaries by £2,000 to £13,950 a year.

The bosses of Big Business do not have to rely on Supplementary Benefit or Family Income Supplement to survive either. Here are some of their incomes:

Lord Grade (Associated Communications Corporation)	£208,000
Sir Maurice Hodgson (ICI)	£124,380
Sir David Steel (British Petroleum)	£120,385
P. Baxendell (Shell)	£110,915
Sir Michael Edwardes (British Leyland)	£100,000
Sir Frances Beckett (Ford)	£76,431
K. S. Showering (Allied Breweries)	£69,474
Sir John Pile (Imperial Group)	£68,000
Sir Marcus Sieff (Marks and Spencer)	£64,077

"NO BRITISH CARS"

BUCKINGHAMSHIRE Area Health Authority administrator Ken Walker was instructed to draw up a list of British-made cars so that the Authority could "Buy British".

But he found that with so many parts being made abroad "it has become impossible to define a British made car". So the Authority has had to abandon its patriotic scheme.

As we revealed last issue, even British Leyland's new "all-British" Mini Metro is alleged by senior union officials to be 70% foreign. So whatever Thatcher says, in the motor field you can't "Back Britain and Buy British".

NORTHERN IRELAND

LOYALIST PRISONERS SUBJECTED TO SADISTIC ATTACKS

MUCH WAS WRITTEN in the mass media about the plight of the IRA hunger strikers in the H-blocks. There was no shortage of Marxist and liberal journalists making sympathetic noises in their support.

But what about the Loyalist prisoners in Ulster? There are no words of support in Fleet Street newspapers for them. Only rantings of derision and allegations of sectarianism pour forth from the media whenever the subject of Loyalist prisoners is mentioned. Yet these men are imprisoned, not because they are fighting against Britain, but because they are fighting for Britain! They find themselves locked up because they took direct action against this country's enemies.

But not only are these loyal British subjects deprived of their freedom, they are also very often subjected to physical violence from prison officers. Every now and then stories leak out from behind the wire about the harassment of Loyalist prisoners in Long Kesh, Crumlin Road and other prisons in Northern Ireland. One such case has recently come to our notice.

A few month ago a Loyalist prisoner was accused of throwing a salt cellar at a prison officer, even though it duly transpired that it was a Republican who threw the missile. Nevertheless the wrongly accused Loyalist, on no evidence whatsoever, was taken forcibly from his cell and placed on the 'boards'.

On hearing of this victimisation, the other Loyalist prisoners in the block smashed all their cell windows.

After smashing their windows many of the prisoners were taken out by riot squad officers who were equipped with helmets, visors and shields. These officers then proceeded to beat the Loyalists with 3ft. long batons.

In retaliation for this outrageous brutality, other Loyalist prisoners then wrecked all the furniture in their cells. When the cells were completely wrecked the riot squad appeared on the scene. They opened up one cell at the time and ordered each prisoner outside. Those who refused to co-operate were removed forcefully.

Once outside the Loyalist prisoners were spreadeagled against the wall and repeatedly hit in the ribs with batons.

When the warders had cleared the cells the Loyalists were told that, when the order was given, they were to move quickly to their cells. It was then put to them that the quicker they moved the less chance they had of getting hurt. When the order to move came the Loyalists tried to return to their cells but were forceably held back by the warders who then started to punch and kick them.

The prisoners were then left in their cells where the floors, mattresses and blankets were soaked in urine, because the warders had kicked their pots around while clearing out. The prisoners laid on the urine soaked blankets for seven nights without sheets or blankets.

As a result of the physical assaults on the Loyalists, two prisoners were taken to hospital for x-rays. One for a dislocated shoulder, the other for a suspected broken nose. Various other prisoners had black eyes and visible bruises. Many prisoners also had personal possessions such as radios stolen by the warders during the violence.

This sadistic violence perpetrated against prisoners whose only 'crime' was to fight against Republican murderers cannot in any way be condoned. In fact it has got to be emphatically condemned. The Loyalists are not criminals, they are prisoners of war. The war is both against Republicanism and against the British Government, and it is a war which all loyal British subjects should be fighting.

British Nationalists must show solidarity with the Loyalist prisoners in Northern Ireland. We are fighting the same war and the same enemies, and only through united and determined action can that war be won and those enemies defeated!

OVER HALF of the prisoners held in Ulster's gaols are Loyalists.

The majority of these men and women are in fairly good health – considering the harsh regime these defenders of Ulster are subjected to. However, some suffer from serious illnesses such as Multiple Sclerosis, Diabetes and Chronic Bronchitis.

Unlike Republicans, who are released on the slightest "medical" pretence, Loyalists are left to rot.

Nationalism Today joins the Loyalist Welfare Groups in demanding the release on medical grounds of these four Loyalist Prisoners.

One Loyalist prisoner who is seriously ill is Sam Cooley.

Sam has served his country in different branches of her Majesty's armed services and also as a member of the Loyalist paramilitary Ulster Volunteer Force. As a member of the UVF, Sam was mainly concerned with its welfare section. However, he was arrested and charged with the possession of arms and has served 4 years of a life sentence.

Members of PIRA are receiving suspended sentences for similar crimes!

Sam is suffering from chronic bronchitis and arthritis and is also confined to hospital.

Bobby Williamson has been in prison since July 1966. He was sentenced to 20 years for his supposed part in the assasination of a Republican in a bar called "Joe Watson's".

Bobby has been suffering from diabetes since 1975 and his health is generally in decline.

"Gusty" Spence – one of the famous Spence brothers – has also been in prison since 1966. He was convicted and sentenced along with Bobby Williamson, for the unproven murder of a Republican.

Gusty – who has been refused parole twice to attend the funerals of his brothers William and Bobby – has had a number of heart attacks. He has also had a gall bladder operation.

Edith McMullan has served 4 years of a sentence for driving a "getaway" car. As in other cases, the sub-human scum of the IRA only receive suspended or recorded sentences for similar offences.

Edith has diabetes and is in hospital because of diabetic comas.

Gusty Spence, Loyalist Prisoner of War, proudly displays the symbols of his beliefs. This picture was taken just before he took the salute at a march-past of his fellow prisoners inside the Maze Prison.

FRENCH GOVERNMENT BACKS DOWN TO THE POWER OF THE BANKS

THE FRENCH 'Socialist' Government has backed out of its plans to nationalise foreign banks.

This not altogether surprising development is a reversal of the radical policies which got Mitterand's 'Socialist' regime elected earlier this year. This latest cop-out is typical of the phony socialist governments which have been elected in a number of other European countries in previous years. They make a lot of hard-line noises and radical promises which turn out to be nothing but hot air once they have achieved power. They, like their conservative counterparts, do nothing more than merely tinker with the financial system whilst never actually really changing it.

The underlying reason for the cop-outs by Mitterand and other 'Socialist' regimes is their subservience to finance capitalism. This fact is borne out by the Daily Telegraph which admitted on September 24th that "the decision to exempt foreign banks from its nationalisation plans reflects the French Government's strong desire to keep the international financial community sweet".

MITTERAND: Selling out to International Finance.

GERMANS HOUNDED

Stimulated by a new television series, Germans are debating whether there is a comparison between Hitler's 'crimes against humanity' and the sufferings of 14 million Germans hounded from their homes in Eastern Europe at the end of the Second World War.

An estimated two million of these refugees died. Some were raped and killed by the advancing Red Army.

Others collapsed on the trek to the West or were torpedoed while being ferried across the Baltic.

For years, whenever fairytales like 'Holocaust' or other films dealing with the 'horrors' of Nazi concentration camps have been shown in Germany, many German viewers have complained that they are only being shown one side of the story.

So for the first time, German television has run in recent days a three-part documentary series on the expulsion of millions of Germans from Eastern Europe.

The programmes evoked such a strong audience response that West Germany's main television channel re-arranged its schedule on Tuesday night to allow a 90-minute dicussion with 12 panelists and phone-in questions from viewers.

One viewer touched a raw nerve by asking whether Britain and America had any right to preach morality to the Germans when they had bombed Dresden and Nagasaki, killing hundreds of thousands of innocent civilians.

Americans build up Russian war machine

WHEN THE Soviets embarked upon their 'reorganisation' of Afghanistan's internal affairs, America imposed a partial grain embargo on them. Under the new Reagan administration this embargo was lifted and now Russia has negotiated a further year's supply with the option of extending it indefinitely. It appears that the only victims of the USA's 'tough' protest measures over the Afghan invasion were their own athletes!

That American money and know-how has been keeping the USSR afloat since its creation is a fact which is becoming more difficult to deny as time goes by. The latest episode in this now familiar saga concerns the revelations about the leakage of high technology electronics to the Communists.

America's main electronics centre where many of their development and production companies are based is near San Francisco at a place called 'Silicon Valley'. From here billions of dollars worth of equipment finds its way via the black market, the Mafia or by simply marking the containers 'washing machines' to the Eastern Bloc. Even more disturbing is the fact that most of the equipment has a direct military application, being crucial components for modern weapons and defence systems. Not many American citizens will be aware that as soon as their new Trident missile submarines are deployed Soviet ships will be tracking them using computerised sensor equipment supplied by their fellow citizens in the electronics companies.

But when Russia doesn't want to be bothered with the tedious business of buying a certain item they can always get a look at the plans. If American military experts were surprised to learn that the guidance system in Russia's latest intercontinental ballistic missile was copied from the one used on their own missiles they would have been even more surprised at their government's explanation. The technology had apparently been acquired by a Soviet exchange student who just happened to be allowed access to a few blueprints or prototypes.

The implications of this are simple, if America still wants to keep one step ahead in the arms race she will have to line still further the pockets of the electronics companies to the tune of billions of dollars.

But this is not all, for what is even more interesting is the U.S. government's apparent lack of concern or action over the problem. At Silicon Valley the only people keeping an official eye on the situation are the small local sherriff's department who have no facilities to cope with the high technology theft and illegal exporting that is going on around them. At San Francisco airport, where most of the equipment destined for Eastern Europe departs, the situation is even more unbelievable. There is no pre-departure examination of cargoes and export documents do not have to be produced until four days after the goods have flown!

The smoke screen of excuses and promises to tighten up offered by government officials does not alter the fact that a country which has in the C.I.A. one of the most ruthless security services in the world, has allowed its most important technology to fall into communist hands. This cannot be explained away as naivete or, even as some have claimed, of 'detente gone wrong'. It could only happen with the veiled approval of some powerful section of the American hierarchy.

WORLD AFFAIRS

WOULD YOU LET YOUR DAUGHTER ...

RACIALISM is alive and well and flourishing in Israel. This is the only conclusion that can be drawn from the recent elections to the Israeli Knesset.

A party that polled well was the Kach Party. It was formed seven years ago by former Jewish Defence League leader Rabbi Meir Kahane, who originates from the Bronx.

The Kach Party campaigned on a "Greater Israel" ticket and demanded the expulsion of all Arabs from their homeland.

The outline of its plan were contained in a full-page election advert which appeared in all Israeli newspapers. Below the picture of a young woman were the words:

"This is a Jewish girl, she might be your daughter or sister. But can you be sure she will marry a Jew? If the question shocks you, you should visit Haifa, Tel Aviv or even holy Jerusalem at night. You will see the Arabs loitering in the Jewish towns and chasing Jewish girls. Their pockets are full of money, because they don't serve in the army. While we are defending the homeland they are getting rich... In order to stop the defilement of our national honour, we shall propose a law which will punish every non-Jew who has sexual relations with a Jewish woman with five years imprisonment."

The advert ended with the ominous announcement that "this will just be the beginning". Another advert announced proposals for the introduction of "compulsory labour battalions" for those Arabs who have still not left "voluntarily".

When criticised for the undemocratic nature of his party's proposals, Rabbi Kahane replied: "There is a profound contradiction between Zionism and democracy".

RHODESIA: RED TYRANNY AFTER WHITE SELL-OUT

NOW THAT the dust of his Tory-backed takeover of White Rhodesia has settled, Robert Mugabe, the Marxist Black terrorist murderer whom the Tories hailed as "moderate and statesmanlike" whilst they were surrendering Rhodesia to him, has reverted to type. In August he announced that he intended to set up a one-party state "in the interests of democracy". And now he has started "democratically" silencing critics and ensuring that the Party Line prevails in the Press and education.

For ecample, Mrs Jean Maitland Smith, White editor of the Umtali Post, is to be sacked from the paper where she has worked for forty years at the behest of Mugabe and his "Information Minister", one Nathan Shamuyarira. Her crime? Politely asking "Comrade Mugabe" in an editorial what 106 North Korean Army "advisers" were doing in Rhodesia. Mugabe would rather not answer that one, as the truth is that they are training the "Fith Army Brigade" of Mugabe's Army in the use of tanks and heavy weapons supplied by Communist N. Korea.

This "Brigade" is actually Mugabe's own hand-picked personally loyal bodyguard, which Mugabe recently described as a "crack unit" to deal with dissidents and other trouble in the country". The North Koreans should be especially able to train the 5,000 strong "Brigade" to do this since their own country is run by a megalomaniac dictator such as Mugabe aspires to be, one Kim Il Sung, to whom incidentally the Tory Press is always happy to rent a page or two to express his "words of wisdom".

Meanwhile, Mugabe's President, the not inappropriately named Mr. Banana, has announced a purge of White teachers who refuse "re-education" to "change their attitudes" to the "New Zimbabwe". Most White teachers expect the sack, and expect also, that in future Rhodesia's schoolchildren including the remaining White children, will be taught exclusively by "politically reliable" Black Marxists.

None of this will surprise anyone who has seen the Negro demonstrate, all over Africa, his inability to rule himself other than through corrupt and brutal tyranny. But it serves as a well deserved lesson to the "right wing" Whites of Rhodesia who tamely laid down their arms and entrusted their future to the "right wing" reactionary Tory slug and Thatcherite minion Lord Soames. As one would expect of a Tory, Soames promptly sold them out to the most bloodthirsty Red would-be despot around.

So now the Rhodesian Whites are having to do what they would have had to do anyway had they been honourably defeated in battle rather than cravenly surrendering: flee the country, abandoning the farms and factories they raised in three generations from the savage bush. That's what comes of trusting Tories and "right wingers" like Ian Smith. Radical nationalists will have little sympathy for those Rhodesian Whites who were stupid or naive enough to do so. They got what they deserved. It is only to be hoped that White South Africans, currently still pinning their hopes on their local "right wingers", learn their lesson in time.

U.N. DEMOCRACY IN ACTION

IN A TYPICAL display of its meaningful commitment to free speech and democratic decision-making, the United Nations General Assembly voted by 117 votes to 22 on September 4th to expel the South African delegation from the debate on the South African territory of South West Africa. This follows an earlier decision in the interests of fair play and "justice" by 113 votes to 24 that the South Africans should not be allowed to present their case on the subject or otherwise say anything in the debate.

This is the fourth time since 1974 that the South Africans have been given the opportunity to take part in the democratic U.N. process by being kicked out of debates about themselves. Fortunately the U.N. General Assembly has about as much relevance to the future of South Africa as the monkey house at London Zoo, which in many ways it resembles. It may well be asked, though, why the South Africans bother attending this American-financed Negroid Communist Punch and Judy show. Or for that matter, why does Britain?

Indians Form 'Wogs Out' Movement

IT IS NOW some months since the inhabitants of the North-East Indian state of Tripura massacred over 1,000 Bangladeshis in a rather vigorous anti-immigration protest. Yet anti-immigrant feeling in India has not died down, as recent events in the state of Assam show.

Immigrants dominate the state's agriculture, commerce, industry and white collar jobs. Now the Assamese are fighting to win their country back. Prime Minister Mrs. Gandhi has promised to repatriate all illegal immigrants who entered the state after 1971 and 2,300 have so far been expelled.

But the locals are not satisfied. Militant students are leading a "foreigners out" movement and angry workers have killed hundreds of immigrants who have been brought in as cheap labour by big contracting firms who bribe politicians into silence about the alien invasion.

PROPAGANDA Versus PRIDE

IT WAS Saturday evening at about nine o'clock and like millions of others I looked to see what was on television. I was, to say the least, downhearted at the choice open to me.

On BBC1 at 9.30 was Roots, repeat. 98% of the population must have seen this tedious serial the first time round, since it was then presented by the saturation technique, in which one block-busting programme dominates several days' viewing and is therefore almost inescapable. Strangely enough, a production called Holocaust was treated to similar publicity. It must surely be a coincidence that both are rabidly anti-White/Gentile? Or perhaps it is merely that the crimes of the guilty White race are so horrific that it needs mammoth productions of this kind to bring them home to the viewers?

Looking at the BBC2 column, I realised with disappointment that I had missed most of a Bernard Levin interview with Lord Weinstock, one of the best-loved Britons of our time. He is, to quote The Times, 'head of GEC and – because he has had the ear of both Labour and Consevative governments – a man of much power, nuclear and otherwise.' A great man indeed . . .

I wonder if Messrs. Levin and Weinstock stayed on to watch Film International at 9.15, featuring the film Bolweiser which, I learn from the Daily Telegraph's summary, 'is based on a book by Oskar Maria Graf, a German pacifist who fled to America in the 1930s when the Nazis began making bonfires with books' and 'is most memorable for the subtle way it conveys the conditions of the lower middle class during the Weimar Republic, conditions which were later to provide the breeding ground for Fascism.' Not being a cultured person, I decided to give that particular masterpiece a miss.

Instead, I pinned my last hopes on ITV's offering . . .' Magnum. Never again . . . Never Again. Magnum befriends a couple of survivors of the Nazi holocaust, but when one of them goes missing he gets himself involved in a case of multiple murder.' At this point I abandoned the television set.

Nationalists have long been aware of the propaganda put out by the mass media, and television has been singled out as an especially effective means of political indoctrination. But what is striking about the programmes I have just mentioned is both the frequency with which they occur on our screens (remember, I only described one night's viewing), and the fact that they do not appear to be politically motivated, being disguised as 'entertainment'.

"FAMILY SAGA"

Roots, for example, although obviously concerned with the history of Blacks in America, masquerades as a family saga with a difference. It is in fact devised to make Whites in the USA and Britain feel guilty about the way Blacks were treated in the Southern States. It deliberately exaggerates the grievances of the Blacks and paints most of the Whites as purely two-dimensional characters. It attempts to provoke pity for a section of the American (and British) population that enjoys far more special privileges than almost any other in the world. It attempts to destroy White people's natural identification with their ancestors and kinsfolk by making them seem revolting and violent savages, while at the same time glorifying the Black characters around whom the programme is based. Since it was written by a Black, this attitude is perhaps to be expected, but why was it ever allowed to be made, let alone given 'classic' status, when it is blatantly biased towards Blacks and therefore racist?

INTIMIDATED

The answer, of course, is that those who own and run the mass media in Britain and America actively inflate Black prestige and imprint guilt into the minds of Whites. This is done to ensure that Whites feel totally intimidated and never regain any pride in their race which might lead them to threaten the grip that the alien media masters have on Western Society. This is the motive behind all references to the 'oppression of Blacks' and the 'Nazi Holocaust'. Every film examining the society that bred the 'evils of Fascism', every play about the 'terrible difficulties' faced by Black families in Britain, every episode of a series in which the hero comes face to face with a 'sinister and dangerous Neo-Nazi threat', carries the same message to the gullible viewers: 'You are worthless!' it says, 'You are evil!' it shouts, 'You are guilty!' it screams. 'You are guilty!' and the frightened White man shrinks back in horror.

This is what we, as White Nationalists, are up against. This is the sort of propaganda that we must never underestimate. The individual left-wing journalists and TV reporters are nothing. The public can see through them, if they try. Our real enemies are those who stifle all criticism of themselves and the corrupt society off which they feed by misusing people's consciences and twisting their minds against those who are fighting for the freedom of their race. Our real enemies are not the Marxist scribblers who smear the name of White Nationalism, but those above who allow them to do so, who indulge in 'anti-Fascism' for their own purposes. People with more influence and power than you or I could ever imagine.

FIGHT BACK

These then are our enemies. But what can we do to fight back against them?

Their propaganda of hatred against White Nationalism has been going on for years now and for some of our people it is too late. Their brains have been completely submerged by the prejudices of powerful aliens. But most of our people can still be saved.

There is still a part of them that has not been fooled, that will not succumb to the constant bombardment of brainwashing. Deep down there is still a sense of racial identity. Perhaps they are ashamed to show it and hide it away, but it is still there.

Lord Weinstock

We must try to bring this part of them out into the open. To achieve this, we ourselves must never be afraid to show our racism. The National Front must continue, as it is already doing, to demonstrate to the public through its activities and literature that it is a White, British and racialist movement. This is essential if we want the White population to flock to us as race war approaches. The more we cloak our racism in 'reasonableness' the easier it will be for Establishment parties to steal 'racist' support by hinting, as the Tories did in 1979, that they will stand up for the White population. Fortunately, the present leadership of the NF seems to have recognised this fact. The National Front must be firmly established in the minds of the population as the White racist party. In the short term this may not win support, but as things get worse, Whites will begin to identify with the NF because it is White. Their feelings of racial identity will be brought to the surface, and once this stage has been reached we can begin to teach our people how to be proud of their race. When we have restored the pride of the British people the enemy will no longer be able to use its weapons of demoralisation and racial guilt. White Nationalism will then, at last, have the strength to rise up and smash its loathsome foes.

WELFARE – What A State

NICK GRIFFIN EXAMINES THE FAILINGS OF THE WELFARE STATE

UNEMPLOYMENT is now over 3 million, but the Tory press still talks about "spongers" who won't work because they are "better off on the dole". Tory M.P.'s will admit that things are not going too well, but still stand by the myth that there is "no real poverty" in Britain today. This is socially divisive rubbish.

No-one who has been on the dole will fall for such drivel. In the dole queue you see the shame and degradation of the old men signing on for the first time in a lifetime of proud labour. You see the hopelessness in the eyes of the school-leavers, who are probably right in fearing that they will never get a job.

For everyone there, there is the nerve-tearing frustration of dealing with a bureaucratic system which is deliberately designed to be as cumbersome as possible. Any attempt to gain some extra entitlement, such as milk tokens for your children, takes repeated visits and futile interviews. Yet at the first opportunity "they" are ready to cut off your money and make you begin the whole process all over again – with nothing to live on in the meantime.

And all for what? The payments are pathetic. Hundreds of thousands of people receive a mere £19.20 a week. That's just about enough for food, but not for "luxuries" such as toothpaste or washing powder, let alone new shoes or a winter overcoat. It is true that the Welfare State "safety net" stops people from starving to death (although thousands of pensioners who can't afford heating bills and nutritious food die each year from hypothermia) but that is all it does.

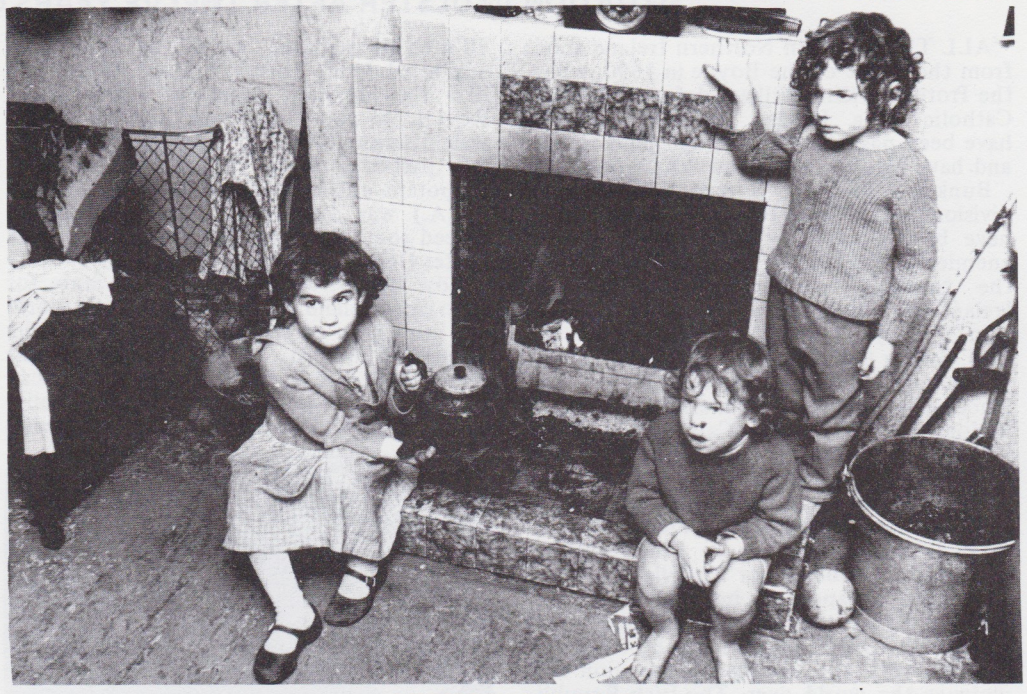
The system is especially hard on families with young children. As the Journal of Human Nutrition points out: "State benefits grossly underestimate the needs of children and the price of food. Many 5-10 year olds need as much food as an adult. The allowance for children in this age group is only third of the rate paid for an adult."

INADEQUATE

Council housing for young families is also very inadequate. Well over 1,200 children every year are taken away from their parents and put into local authority care SOLELY because the family is homeless. If the Welfare State was working properly, local authorities would house families in this position, not break up otherwise healthy family units!

Poverty breaks up families in less direct ways as well. As the Select Committee on Violence in the Family pointed out "inadequate housing produces a great deal of stress in parents and can turn difficult but normal circumstances of child upbringing into almost impossible ones". The combination of boredom and helplessness produced by life on the dole is even worse and is directly responsible for the breakup of thousands of marriages.

The rising unemployment rate even hits those who manage to retain a job. The threat of redundancy is in many cases a constant worry, while the large pool of surplus labour makes it easier for employers to hold down wages. Even in 1978, half a million children lived in families where the family income was below the official poverty line, even though one or both parents went out to work. Half a million. Just think about it! 500,000 individual British children with empty bellies, ragged clothes and damp crumbling homes. And that was three years ago, before things started to get "bad"!



LIVING IN POVERTY.

All this is having its inevitable effect on our nation's health. There has been a marked rise in suicides linked to job worries. Britain's homes saw over 6,000 deaths last year due to poor facilities and faulty fittings. And, of course, it's the unemployed and the poor who are hardest hit. As a recent Court Report stated "twice as many children of unskilled workers die in the first year of life as children of professional workers and the gap has been widening steadily for 25 years. Children still die for nineteenth century reasons."

Doctors say that the main reason is that women in poor families find it difficult to take time off work to go to hospital, to pay to get there and to have their other children looked after.

WIDESPREAD POVERTY

So while you don't see children walking about with bare feet, don't believe the smug claims that "Britain has no real poverty". There is widespread poverty and, as redundancy bonuses and earnings related benefits shrink away, there is going to be a lot more. When the effects of government cuts and Britain's continued economic collapse bite even deeper, the Welfare State "safety net" will be ripped to shreds.

The Welfare State can only become really effective when economic recovery and an end to the Bankers' swindle allows the government to spend the necessary money. The National Front's economic policies are the only programme under which this will happen.

But the victory of the N.F. will bring more than economic changes. It will bring an end to the total disregard for the interests of our own people encouraged by internationalism. The victory of the National Front will bring, more than anything else, a spiritual change in the British people.

That change will mean an end to the prevailing view that the dole and other state benefits are unearned and undeserved charity payments. Instead they will be seen as the just reward for contributions to the national community. In the Racial Nationalist state there will be a duty to work, but it will carry with it the right to a decent standard of living for all.

The War Against The I.R.A.

JOHN AUSTIN, AN N.F. MEMBER IN BELFAST, LOOKS AT THE SITUATION IN ULSTER AFTER TWELVE YEARS OF VIOLENCE.

"ALL TROUBLE in Northern Ireland stems from the battle of the Boyne in 1690, when the Protestant King William defeated Roman Catholic King James. Sectarian divisions have been passed down through generations, and have finally erupted into 'the troubles'.

Bunkum! While it is true that religious divisions do exist in Northern Ireland, they have been preyed upon and expanded by enemies of the Crown, who seek to eat away the Nation's backbone, using Northern Ireland as an entry point.

In 1968 yet another Red front organisation, calling themselves Civil Rights supporters, began a campaign of marches and violence, using the jaded old cries of discrimination against Roman Catholics – poor jobs, poor houses, poor everything else. Since then over two thousand people have been killed and the total rises steadily.

Most people, including the media, refer to what is happening here as "the troubles" "the Ulster problem" or a similar euphemism. What is happening here is nothing less than WAR! All of Britain is threatened, not just Northern Ireland. The war here is synonymous with the upsurge in rebellion and violence the world over. The Irish Republican Army have strong links with Libya's Colonel Gadaffi, and a weapon used frequently in their attacks on security forces is the Russian Kalishnikov rifle. They have been openly aided and abetted by American Irish organisations, like NOR-AID, whose money is used, supposedly for relief from poverty, but in reality is used to purchase arms and explosives. The same Irish Americans successfully blocked the sale of U.S. weapons to the Royal Ulster Constabulary, who have had to bear the brunt of the terrorist activity.

There have been feeble attempts by successive governments to tackle the symptoms of terrorism without tackling the root cause of the problem – the I.R.A. Internment was introduced in 1972, which applied to Loyalists as well as Republicans, and in any event did not last. This course led to street riots (and still does each year on the anniversary of its introduction) and the rioters were subject to the same weak dicipline which has existed for such a long time, so in the long run it created more problems than it solved.

APPEASEMENT

We have seen one political appeasement after another. The R.U.C.'s Shorland armoured cars were phased out in the early 70's to be replaced, as late as 1977 with armoured Land Rovers, dressed up to look like the standard issue of Police Land Rovers. At about the same time the R.U.C. was disarmed (though later re-armed) and the part-time Ulster Special Constabulary (a potent anti-terrorist force feared by the I.R.A.) was disbanded, to be partially replaced some time later by the military style Ulster Defence Regiment.

Roy Mason, while Secretary of State for Northern Ireland proudly showed the world the iron ring of security gates around the centre of Belfast, while the Government allowed the I.R.A. to operate in Republican enclaves, such as Andersontown, Ballymurphy and Turf Lodge, where the terrorists have frequently paraded openly, and in the border areas where they impudently set up road blocks to monitor the movement of cross border traffic.

Another victim of the IRA.

The list is endless, but one travesty stands out above all others – the abolition of the democratically elected Stormont Government and the transfer of power to successive Westminster Governments who have been too weak to use it. The beautiful building of Stormont Castle on the edge of Belfast is now little used, a monument to the capitulation to the the cancer that is eating away all that we hold dear.

So what is the alternative? How can we rid ourselves of the scum in society and restore law and order, making every street in Ulster safe for the patriot to walk along?

TREASON

The crime of treason, punishable by death, should be used to cover membership of the I.R.A. and Irish National Liberation Army.

The border between Northern Ireland and the Irish Republic exists at present in name only. The I.R.A. repeatedly use the South as a haven after committing their atrocities in the North. To prevent this a proper border should be established and manned by armed guards authorised to shoot to kill anyone attempting to cross illegally.

The S.A.S. should be deployed in the Republican enclaves, to work undercover to root out the Godfathers and Quartermasters of the terrorists. They must be authorised to shoot to kill if necessary in the execution of their duties.

These policies would cause an unprecedented uproar in Red dens throughout the world and lead to outcries from the pious liberals who prefer to submit to an enemy, rather than defeat him. They would lead to unrest never before experienced in Republican enclaves. This could bring the terrorists into the open, making them easier targets for the security forces.

When the priority of return to law and order is firmly established, we could then set about reconstituting a democratically elected government based in Stormont.

The only political party with the guts to implement tough policies is the National Front. I call on all Northern Ireland loyalists to support them, as I call on the N.F. to support the Ulster patriots in our time of need.

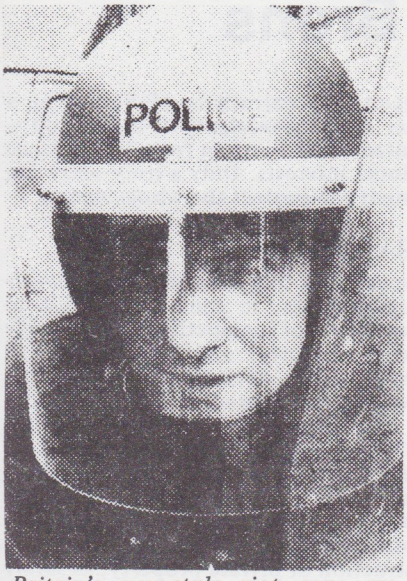
FROM THE 'BOBBY' ON THE BEAT TO THE POLICE STATE



Britain's new-style riot cops are fully equipped to deal with any 'dissident' elements.

The police armoured cars of Belfast will soon be on mainland streets.

No, it's not the U.S. Marines. It's a police Tactical Firearms Unit during a recent 'false alarm'.

CONCENTRATION CAMPS, tear gas, plastic bullets, water cannons, rifles, pistols, flak jackets, bugging devices and armoured cars. No, it's not a lurid description of communist repression in Soviet Russia, nor is it the imagination of an Orwellian-type science fiction author. The above is a list of the armoury being adopted by the British police force!

by Joe Pearce

Gone are the days when the British 'Bobby' walked the streets on the beat. Dead and buried is the Dixon of Dock Green image of the kind hearted policeman helping the old lady across the road. Today the British police force constitutes a State militia designed to supress all 'dissident elements'.

This major arming of Britain's police came in the aftermath of this Summer's Black riots. Following ten solid days of rioting, burning and looting the police understandably asked for better protection from immigrant mobs. As a result, William Whitelaw told the Police Superintendants Association that "CS gas, plastic bullets and water cannon would be made available to police facing riots". This declaration ensured that Britain would take further steps towards the establishment of a Police State.

It really is tragic that the police require such armour to deal with immigrant mobs; and it only goes to show that those who have warned about the dangers of mass immigration and the evil manifestations that arise from it were right all along. But the really ominous implications of the arming of the police force go far beyond the mere quelling of Black riots. What has been created is an Establishment force which, in the future, will be turned against all dissident elements – and that of course includes the National Front!

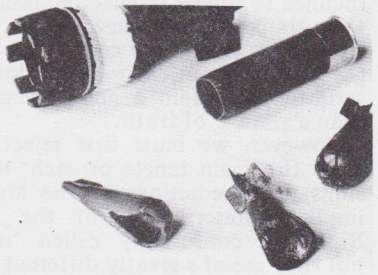
The police have already taken part in a civil exercise, called 'Square Leg', where they were responsible for the rounding up of all 'right-wing extremists'. In the exercise, the police were also responsible for the guarding of concentration camps where all 'hostile elements' were to be kept. There can be no doubting that operation Square Leg was a rehearsal for the real thing when the Establishment gives the order that all racialist groups are banned.

Telephone tapping, electronic bugging and the interception of letters are another example of the growth of the police's Big Brother tactics. Ken Weetch, the Labour M.P. for Ipswich, has admitted that "a whole network for intercepting letters exists in Britain. At every post office there is a list of cards regularly updated with details of every group whose mail the Special Branch or MI5 want to intercept. If you are to the left of the Labour Party or to the right of the Tory Party then there is a high possibility that you will be investigated in some shape or form."

The general council of the TUC has called for legislative safeguards restricting telephone tapping after the Post Office Engineering Union uncovered evidence that tapping is far more widespread than the Government will admit.

When all of the facts are examined it can be seen that the police are no longer just the guardians of law and order. They are training and preparing for the day when they are called in by a decadent and decaying Establishment to suppress all voices of dissent. They have become the tools of Reaction who will be deployed against those who are fighting against the evil excesses of capitalism. In short, they have become the enemies of Freedom itself!

The water cannon in action: How long before these are used against peaceful N.F. demonstrations?



Tear gas cannisters like these, fired during the recent Toxteth riots, will soon be used on White racists.

Police marksmen. Who are they training to kill?

THIS EXTREMELY IMPORTANT article by National Front Chairman Andrew Brons was initially presented to the Party's Policy Department.

This article, together with Joe Pearce's "Ownership of Industry" published in our last issue, shows how the N.F.'s 5-year plan calling for radical ideological development is being carried out.

"WE ARE NOT MARXISTS - WE ARE NOT CAPITALISTS"

By Andrew Brons

ONE CAN sometimes define a phenomenon most effectively by explaining what it is not! So it is with economic and political theories.

We are not Marxists and we are not Capitalists. That scarcely needs to be said; but how does our analysis of, and prescription for, industry and its relationship with the Nation and society, differ from those of our rivals?

Are we really the last resort of Capitalists, who will seek and receive our support in their hour of crisis, as the Marxists would claim? Or are we the 'right foot of socialism' as suggested by laissez-faire (and not so laissez-faire) Conservatives? We are, of course, neither; but that does not mean that we make the fatal error of rejecting in advance any analysis that contains superficial similaries with those of our opponents. Both schools of thought have among their adherents, some apparently intelligent men and women. That is largely attributable to the fact that all but the strongest are inclined to follow intellectual fashions rather than thinking for themselves but that is, by no means, the whole answer. Both analyses (as distinct from their conclusions and prescriptions) contain a grain – but no more than a grain – of truth.

However, we must first reject unequivocally the main tenets of each: the descriptions and predictions of the Marxists; the implicit prescriptions of the Capitalists. Both are confusingly called 'materialism' but they are of a greatly different kinds.

We reject the Marxist belief that human consciousness and social stuctures have their ultimate origins in changing economic relations and that a future change in economic relations will lead to a new human type and to a new society free from antagonism of any kind. We reject the Capitalist prescription that political man must make way for economic man and that our decisions, personal as well as political, should be made on economic grounds; that we should live in order to work, rather than work in order to live.

'ALIENATED'

Marx said that man in Capitalist society is 'alienated' in a number of different but related ways. He is alienated by a division of labour that undermined a man's totality. He is alienated by inhuman working conditions. He is alienated from the product of his own labour, because that product does not answer his own needs, nor even the needs that are truly experienced by others, but is merely put on the market to procure profit for the entrepreneur. That alienation is, according to the Marxists, the inevitable result of an equally inevitable and immutable historical process. It will, say the Marxists, disappear with the elimination of the private ownership and possession of the means of production, distribution and exchange.

The Marxists' account of what they call 'alienation' in a Capitalist system contains some truth but its errors are fundamental; not the least of which is the fact that Marxist theory does not prescribe/predict any course that will resolve that 'alienation'! An elimination of the private ownership and control of the means of production will not only fail to resolve the contradictions of Capitalism; it will serve to reinforce and aggravate them. The 'alienation' suffered by people in a Capitalist system is the product of changing economic relations only in so far as changing economic relations are found to be at variance with unchanging and indeed unchangeable human natures. Thus 'alienation' can be seen to be the product, not of economics, but of biology. Furthermore, we do not accept that the particular pattern of economic changes that we have seen, is the mere unfolding of a pre-ordained social pattern. All structures are the product of our biologically-determined natures and the exercise of a will that is ultimately free as to thought and behaviour, if not as to nature. Finally (but perhaps most important to the formulation of an industrial ideology and policy), 'alienation', as described by the Marxists, results from the fact that in a Capitalist system most people have already been divested of private property; not because of the existence of private property itself. The fault is not that too much property is in private hands; it is that it is concentrated in the hands of too few people.

LOGICAL CONCLUSION

Capitalists say that freedom is a concomitant of property and, in a sense, they are quite correct. It is a great pity that they do not take that principle to its logical conclusion. If private property is individually and socially beneficial – and we, unlike the Marxists, think that it is – it must follow that the greater the number of property owners, the greater the virtue. We value private property and we value it sufficiently, not to be content to see it restricted to the few who own the bulk of industrial, commercial and landed property. We see property providing the link between ourselves and the product of our labour. We see it as a guarantee of our freedom from the arbitrary action of employers, unions, or bureaucrats. We see it as symbolic (particularly when applied to domestic property) of the integrity of the family. However, of greatest importance, we see the break up of the biggest concentrations of wealth as a guarantee of the sovereignty of the Nation – a guarantee of its freedom from interference by sectional interests. Only a truly sovereign government can protect the whole Nation.

INTERVENTION

The suggestion that an absence of government intervention, in some way, leads to the preservation of 'competition' (i.e. widely distributed property) and perhaps that it even leads to the development of 'competition where none existed, is simply not consistent with experience. Absence of 'interference' leads not to healthy 'competition', still less to widespread enterprise. It leads to mergers; to the cartel; to the oligopoly; to the monopoly. There is a very real sense in which unfettered private enterprise leads to the destruction of private property, as surely as does nationalisation.

Capitalism has not only eroded the freedom of those individuals who have lost their independent property. It has also eroded the sovereignty of government. Sovereign goverment cannot co-exist with big business unless it is prepared to merge its identity with that of the business interest. Capitalism and national independence cannot co-exist.

It may be thought that as believers in the natural inequality of men we should at least accept as inevitable vast inequalities of wealth and industrial and commercial holdings and perhaps even greet such inequalities as desirable. It is certainly true that the inherent inequality of men – inequality of intelligence, of energy and of greed for material wealth – would, by itself, lead to great inequalities of wealth and to the accumulation of factors of production in the hands of fewer and fewer people – particularly over many generations. However, there is another important cause. Initial concentrations of wealth inevitably beget further even greater concentrations, because the economic power provides a key to political power which in turn enables the law to be changed to facilitate even further accumulation. The accumulation of wealth in the hands of existing landowners that resulted from the seizure of Church lands by the Crown during the Reformation (and their subsequent redistribution) undoubtedly increased the political and economical power of those people. That political power enabled them to add still further to their wealth by the enclosure movement over several generations. The increased economic power that resulted was translated into further political power during the Eighteenth Century when the big landowners like the Duke of Newcastle finally secured control over the House of Commons

(through the control of 'pocket boroughs'). Thus the great concentrations of wealth in the Eighteenth Century had their origins in the Sixteenth Century. In the same way, the political victory of the bankers in 1688 was translated into the economic victory of 1694 (the establishment of the Bank of England and of the National Debt). The inter-play of the economic and political power of the bankers throughout the last three hundred years has resulted in their unrivalled position of power today not only in the 'Capitalist' West but also in the 'Communist' East.

CONCENTRATIONS OF WEALTH

However, the acceptance of great concentrations of wealth as a fact does not mean that we must welcome them as desirable. Furthermore, to accept something as an inevitable tendency does not mean that we accept it as plainly and simply inevitable. We are certainly not passive determinists. As Nationalists, we are resolved that we will not accept as inevitable any structure of society that threatens the sovereignty of the Nation – and therefore the freedom of us all.

We have said that we do not accept as desirable vast inequalities of industrial and commercial wealth, although we accept as inevitable an underlying and persistent tendency towards greater and greater concentrations. However, that does not mean that we are obsessive egalitarians seeking equality as an end in itself. We do not wish to reward the slothful equally with the industrious; the dull equally with the enterprising. Industry and enterprise must be rewarded if they are to be forthcoming. We are certainly not seeking a Utopian society in which there is anything like exact equality; nor even one in which income and wealth are computed exactly, according to man's needs. We are concerned to achieve three things:

First that every one of our nationals, healthy or infirm, clever or stupid, can enjoy a standard of living that is reasonable with regard to the expectations of our society – providing only that the able are willing to work, if work is available.

Secondly that the sovereignty of the Nation State, the freedoms of its nationals and the interests of its sections, are protected from the encroachments, conscious and unconscious, of the Money Power.

Thirdly, that our nationals should be reintroduced to private property, either as proprietors of their own small business or (in the case of industries in which economies of scale begin to operate at a low level of capital) joint owners through share ownership in the industry in which they are employed.

Reagan sends the troops in

IN THIS column in our last issue, we expressed the view that Reagan's "anti-Communism" was nothing but window-dressing designed to mislead and fool genuine anti-Communists.

Recent events seem to confirm our opinion.

Reagan has announced that he has decided to make a stand against the spread of Communism by sending US economic and military aid, plus US military advisors, to the South American republic of El Salvador.

It is claimed by Reagan that El Salvador is threatened by Communist insurrection. But what are the real facts?

El Salvador is ruled by a civilian-military junta who represent the interests of the fourteen families who own 60% of the land, and the various multi-national corporations who control El Salvador's economy.

While this tiny ruling-class live a life of luxury, the ordinary El Salvador people are cruelly oppressed and exploited and live in absolute poverty.

Far from being Communist as Reagan claims, the Revolutionary Democratic Front – which is fighting the war of liberation – would probably have the support of all Radical Nationalists in its fight to break the grip of the multi-national corporations and the landowning elite, and to transfer to the people the means of production and distribution, whilst encouraging small and medium businesses.

The situation in El Salvador may seem to be of no great importance or interest to British Nationalists. But it does serve to prove that Reagan is not saving the world from Communism – but making it safe for multi-national Capitalism.

Cities terrorised by Black gangs

BLACK and Mexican teenage gangs have imposed a reign of terror in many American cities. In Los Angeles feuds between non-White youth gangs accounted for 192 murders and 203 gun battles in school playgrounds last year alone. It is estimated that in L.A. alone there are 350 Black and Mexican gangs, comprising between 20,000 and 30,000 non-White youths between the ages of 12 and 22 (at the moment four 13 year olds are on trial for a gang murder).

Inter-gang gun battles using pump-action shotguns, handguns, and automatic rifles are frequent, as are assassinations of members of rival gangs by shooting from a passing car. Innocent bystanders, many of them children, are often slaughtered in the crossfire.

Black gangs terrorise city schools. In L.A. despite 280 gun-carrying guards, many of them combat hardened ex-soldiers, patrolling the city's classrooms and playgrounds, there have been 250 sex offences and 600 assaults on teachers in the last school year alone.

In a desperate attempt to stem the slaughter, 137 heavily armed police with helicopter support recently went into a Los Angeles Black ghetto. In a military-style operation, they captured 31 firearms and 8 youths wanted for murder. But it will do little good, since even if young Black murderers brought to trial are not acquitted thanks to their gang cronies packing the courtroom intimidating witnesses the worst they need fear is 2-3 years in a youth detention centre.

Los Angeles is not untypical. Even in Baltimore, a Black gang recently gunned down Philip Rouse, a Somerset antique dealer and, ironically, an active member of his local Labour Party, on holiday as he chased one of them who had just mugged him. In cities all across America, many of which are largely Black (the capital, Washington, is 80% Black), the Black gangs rule the streets, murdering and raping at will. One American is now murdered every 24 minutes on average, day in and day out. This is where the ever growing Black ghettoes and the ever proliferating Black youths are leading Britain.

WHITE RIOT

A FULL-SCALE race riot broke out at a building site in Manhattan when White construction workers fought with 200 Blacks. The riot happened following a protest demonstration by members of a Black group which seeks more jobs for Blacks on construction projects. The clash began when the White construction workers rushed to help one of their colleahues after he had been struck with a brick.

75 mounted police were called in to break up the disturbance and one policeman suffered slight stab wounds.

The Housing Crisis

THERE ARE two million families without homes of their own in Britain. Councils have three million families on their waiting lists and the numbers are rising fast.

But despite Britain's chronic housing problems, thousands of council houses are standing empty. Houses like the ones pictured right which could and should be given to homeless White families.

According to the housing group Shelter, new families who join the waiting list in 1984 will face an average wait of 21 years for a home.

More than 23,000 houses have been empty for more than twelve months, while many thousands more have been empty for six months or more. Some councils regularly take more than six months to fill houses after tenants have moved out. Many more councils have inadequate workforces to cope with the growing backlog of minor repairs and re-decoration. These councils are unable to employ workers from the dole queues to do this work because of the Government's expenditure cuts.

The Tory cuts have also led to a complete ban on building new homes, and little money is available for renovating old properties.

However, local Tory and Labour councils are as much to blame as the Government. Many local authorities have shocking records on housing. There have been council houses standing empty for as long as 22 years.

The problems of homeless Whites are made even worse in many areas because Tory and Labour councils prefer to help immigrants rather than British people. Wandsworth council has been making special efforts to help Asians get homes while the local Whites have been rejected. The Tory council in Wandsworth has produced special housing advice leaflets for the borough's 11,000 Asians. The leaflets are printed in Urdu and Gujarati and they deal with the housing waiting list and rent allowances. The leaflets deal with the "special problems" encountered by Asians.

Since most local councils are concerned primarily with helping immigrants with their "special problems", this Nationalism Today housing feature examines the special problems of homeless White families.

LIVING IN SQUALOR

MRS JACKIE BREWERTON was a good tenant of Portsmouth City Council for thirteen years. Then her husband left and in desperation she packed her bags and took her son Gary to live with her mother in Yorkshire.

When she returned to Portsmouth, the council had evicted her from her home and were demanding £216 rent arrears. They put her into a hostel for homeless people and eventually housed her in a run down slum in Leonard Road.

She and three-year-old Gary have to share the house with another family. They have four rooms but live and sleep in one. One of their rooms is too damp and the other two are upstairs through the other family's accommodation.

Mrs Brewerton, 33, says: "I could only fit a single bed in one of those rooms – the other is too small for a bed. That would mean I had to leave Gary up there on his own, too far away from me. So we have both our beds in the front room."

The room is crammed with a double bed, a single bed, a sideboard and a television. Cooking utensils hang over the bed. She shares the kitchen and the outside lavatory with the other family.

The filthy condition of the rooms have made both Mrs Brewerton and her son ill. The walls in the damp room are thick with mould.

"We both had coughs and bad chests," she said, "and Gary had nose bleeds. The doctor told us to move out."

It is scandalous that councils force White families to live in such squalor while there are millions of Blacks living in relative comfort.

However, it would be wrong to put all the blame on the Government and local authorities. They certainly make the situation worse by neglecting the problems of homeless Whites, but the housing crises is due largely to the usurious interest rates imposed by the banks. This burden of debt makes it impossible for local authorities to implement the repairs necessary to allow White families like Mrs Brewerton and Gary to live in the standard of accomodation which they deserve.

Under the present banking system local councils have to spend most of their money paying interest charges to the banks, so they can't afford to either build new houses or renovate old ones. This situation will continue to get worse unless the banks are either nationalised or socialised. Only then will the banks become the servants of the British economy instead of being masters of economic decline as they are now.

Why Blacks are bottom of the class

A MAJOR ROW has broken out over the interim report of a Government Commision set up to find out why West Indians in British schools are consistently so backward compared to other pupils. Three members of the Commision have resigned over "fudging" of the report and its Chairman, Anthony Rampton, was sacked by former Education Secretary Mark Carlisle for producing an unsatisfactory report.

That West Indian schoolchildren are less intelligent than others is not in doubt. Even the Times had to admit on June 18th that "the basic fact is that West Indian pupils are on average strikingly less successful than others at school, on almost every test of academic achievement. Far fewer gain high grades in CSE and GCE, far more are in schools for the educationally subnormal." But what Rampton and his colleagues were meant to do was to explain why this is and what can be done about it.

Of course, scientists have known the answer for sixty years. Negroes are inherently less intelligent than Whites, by an average of 15%, and that is all there is to it. They simply are not genetically fitted to go to White schools or to live in White society.

But no Establishment individual or body dares to admit this fact, though it stares them in the face. To do so would be "racist".

So they invent lots of excuses for the hapless Negroes. They are suffering "the shock of transition from one society to another". But as the Times conceded "The present generation of young Blacks in school is almost entirely British born and the disparity is still marked".

They are the victims of "language difficulties". But even the Rampton Commision "does not accept that language plays any part in the underachievement of West Indian children in British schools, most of whom were born in this country".

So in the end Rampton falls back on the hoary old chestnut of "White Racist Society", which is supposed to exert some mysterious cosmic influence on the growth of Black brains. The basic idea seems to be that if people don't like you it will make you stupid!

INTELLECTUALLY INFERIOR: Black schoolchildren are still bottom of the class.

NOT SO STUPID

The trouble with this is that, apart from sounding rather silly in the first place, it doesn't explain why Asians, who are just as unpopular in this country as Blacks, aren't as stupid. Over to the Times again: "The Rampton Committee's research showed a striking difference of average achievement between children of West Indian and Asian origin. The latter are much closer to White children in their pattern of exam success. Yet Asians also suffer from poverty, overcrowding and discrimination that is worse in some ways – and many of them have the additional handicap of speaking English as a second language."

The basic problem is that blaming "White Racist Society" doesn't make the Blacks any brighter. Nor does more "multi-cultural education" – telling Blacks their ancestors were brilliant geniuses – help much. All "multi-cultural education" does, as a Schools' Council report based on a two-year nationwide study revealed, is lead to White childrens' education suffering. Sixty head teachers in immigrant-infested inner city areas warned the council that "White children are missing out at school because of the attention teachers give pupils with problems from Immigrant backgrounds."

Perhaps if you don't teach the White kids at all they will do as badly as the Blacks and the problem will be solved!

The danger, from the System's point of view, is that ramming ever more "multi-cultural" claptrap down teachers' throats starts ominous "racist" rumblings. One head teacher dared mutter "Multi-ethnic groups are here because they wish to be – why should it be incumbent on the indigenous population to make changes?" So the Schools' Council report recommended "special action to help White British children in multi-racial areas".

Also, blaming "latent racism" amongst trendy liberal teachers for the failings of their beloved Blacks doesn't go down too well. Both the Communist-dominated National Union of Teachers and the more Toryish National Association of Schoolmasters indignantly denied Rampton's suggestion that their members might be "racist".

"WEAK AND INCONSISTENT"

So we are no further on. The System is starting to realise this: Ex-education Secretary Carlisle, considering the report "weak and inconsistent", fired Rampton and replaced him with Oxford academic Lord Swann, presumably hoping the noble Lord could pull a rabbit out of the hat and explain away Negro dimness where Rampton had failed. Indeed, three of Rampton's Committee minions, realising how feeble Rampton's "Not Being Liked Make You Stupid" theory is, have tried to do just this. Not, of course, that they uttered blasphemous thoughts about inherited racial differences in brain-power. But they did want to make some mention of the "home background problems" of young Negroes. Certainly, families in which Big Brother is out mugging old ladies when he isn't smoking "ganja", Big Sister is "on the game" and Dad is quite unknown (even to Mum!) are scarcely conducive to an academic and studious atmosphere. But this is hardly the sort of thing the Establishment wants mentioned. Domestic promiscuity, pot-smoking, prostitution, fecklessness and criminality are nearly as "racist" explanations of Negro school problems as inherited low IQ.

So all mention of the home background was censored from the final report, and three of those who wanted it mentioned resigned. All of them were White, though nine of the 20 Committee members are from "ethnic minorities". All in all, this 120-page report is a bit of a mess, and it's hardly surprising that the Government sacked the principal author.

Of course, you can always try to pretend the problem doesn't exist, in the hope that it will go away on its own. That's what the Red-run National Union of Teachers seem to want to do. In May they got a study of West Indian school performance planned by the Department of Education cancelled by "refusing co-operation".

But the problem won't just go away. Black pupils will go on being dim at school. The System will go on grovelling to them and lavishing "multi-cultural education" baloney on Blacks whilst the education of White pupils goes on suffering. The Establishment, Carlisle, Rampton, Lord Swann and the rest, will never face the facts, however obvious, about the inherited, genetic mental inferiority of the Negro. But we in the NF will. Once we're in power we'll send Black children, and their parents, back to their own countries, out of the way of "White Racist Society". And even before that, we'll keep repeating the fact that "Blacks do badly at school because they're intellectually inferior. Forget about them, and put British schoolkids first in their own country!"

THANK YOU!

Nick Griffin would like to thank all the people who worked so hard in the Croydon N.W. by-election.

NOT GREAT?

Dear Sir,

After reading your 'Rite Up' page I feel that I must pass comment on your article headed 'Alexander the not Great'. I know that this article was a light hearted poke at the Communist Councillors of Nepolis, Northern Greece, but it does give the wrong impression that Alexander of Greece was a Racial Hero when the truth is that he did more then his fair share in destroying Greece.

He was under the illusion that all he needed to do was to assimilate all non-Greeks into the Nordic Grecian culture and he would have a paradise on earth. He built centres of learning in Greece and filled them with thousands of half caste people imported from the many nations that he conquered. On the top of all this he fetched thousands of half caste slaves to Greece. The seeds of destruction had been sown. The slaves became free and married into the Nordic racial stock and soon Greece fell, never to rise again.

What ever his intention was Alexander betrayed his own race and must go down in history as a Race Traitor. The men who founded the Greek Empire and served in the Grecian Phalanxes did not belong to the same breed who broke and ran from their foes in the declining years of the Empire. The founders of Greece were Nordic but the breeds that presided over its destruction were half castes. Alexander with his many conquests and his policy of putting nation before race must take at least part of the blame for the fall of the Greek Empire.

We can learn a vital lesson from this. Sadly blood poisoning is now also polluting our race and if it is not reversed Great Britain will go the same way as Rome and Greece.

RACE AND NATION FIRST.

IDEOLOGY

Dear Sir,

I enclose my subscription for Nationalism Today.

The article on page 8 of the last issue "Industrial Ownership And Radical Nationalism" was very good. Can you run a series on Nationalist ideology to counteract the Socialist arguments?

H. MacQueen, Glasgow.

NUCLEAR POWER

Dear Sir,

I strongly object to Steve Brady's last sentence in his pro nuclear power article in the last issue of NT (Mighty Atom: Friend or Foe?).

I am neither a red or a reactionary. Just because the reds in this and other Western countries (with the notable exception of the French CP) are against nuclear power, it does not mean that Nationalists have automatically to be for it.

The CPGB is against the Common Market and so are we. The CPGB is for import controls – and so are we.

I would like to take this issue further and bring in the subject of safety. I strongly recommend anyone to read "Nuclear Disaster in the Urals" by the Russian dissident, Zhores Medvedev. This book is about an explosion at a Soviet nuclear-waste disposal area in the Urals. Approximately 1,000 square miles was – still is – and shall remain so for generations, contaminated by radiation. Hundreds died, thousands were injured and damage was immense.

The disaster was known to both the Soviet Government and the "American" government, via the CIA. Yet both choose to keep it a secret, and if this is not some kind of conspiracy – what is!

Yours Faithfully,

Jim Capes, Norwich.

NF TRADE UNIONIST

Dear Sirs,

"100,000 rallying in Liverpool, 70,000 on the march against unemployment in Glasgow . . . they are proof that this government can be turned, can be deflected, can be made to back off from at least some of their worst policies."

This is the political garbage being fed to hundreds of thousands of dissatisfied British workers, all with the fear of unemployment on their minds.

The perpetrators of this lie are the leaders of the nation's largest union, the 2½ million strong Transport and General Union.

Either this leadership have no understanding of the problems facing their members, or they are despicable liars, deliberately misleading British men and women and their estimated 12 million dependants.

If they are the former, then it is time they were kicked out of their nice inflation-proofed jobs. Jobs which bring these "champions of the workers" into the same social set as the landed gentry, world leaders, Government and Opposition members and film stars.

However, it is more likely that these men have more in common with my second suggestion – despicable liars.

They know what's happening, they also know that the only answer to it is a revolutionary one. An answer which would require them to attack the very Establishment which they have crawled so hard to become part of.

It would mean attacking Internationalism, a creed very dear to this bunch of Neo-Marxists. It would also mean attacking multi-racialism, a system currently depriving the British workforce of over a million jobs. It would mean returning Britain to its former glory, a Britain where there would be no place for parasites and their anti-British Marxism.

What is urgently needed is a Revolutionary, White Nationalist leadership in the Trade Union movement. A leadership with an understanding of the recession, a feeling for the British people and the courage to act on it.

The sooner that all working Nationalists take an active interest in their unions and in the trust and dependency of their fellow workers the better.

With this grass roots base won, we can then do battle to win progressively higher Trade Union elections until we reach the objective of a National Front Trade Union leadership.

Congratulations on your excellent magazine.

Dave Dowsett, TGWU, London W.

LOYALIST

Dear NT,

Some things I would like to say concerning Ulster:

Ordinary papers would be afraid to print these points, but I'm sure you will. Firstly, Dolores Price, the IRA murderer who did the Birmingham pub bombings, was released from jail years before she was supposed to be by Humphrey Atkins, simply because she couldn't keep food down and was said to be dying. Yet two weeks later she attended Sands' funeral and walked four miles there and back. No doubt she will now continue her anti-British campaign. If Sands had called off his hunger strike he would have been a free man in three years, seven years before he should have been released.

A UDA friend of mine informed me that the army 'Spearhead' battalion drafted into Ulster is only to be used if Loyalists cause trouble. So if the IRA fight part-time soldiers and we fight crack forces, how can we win?

The Republicans are full of "Brits out" chants, but they seem to forget that the British army only came over to save them from the Loyalists. Two more nights and we would have driven them south of the border where they belong.

When the army arrived they were cheered in all Republican areas and got a heroes' welcome. Now the same people want them out. But if the army left the same thing would happen all over again and there would be no one to save them.

Finally, I would like to inform you that your support over here is steadily growing. After the recent Northern Ireland v. Portugal match, 10,000 Loyalists marched through Belfast chanting NF slogans.

It's time people's eyes were opened to the real facts of Ulster, with your help it can be done.

'Skin', Belfast.

A PIG TALE

What would we do without the aristocracy to look up to? Where would we be without the "upper" classes showing us all how to behave like good British people?

Pictured above is Viscount Weymouth who has just been awarded the Looney Aristocrat Of The Year award. Viscount Weymouth, better known to his friends as Alexander, is the 49-year-old heir to the Marquis of Bath.

Alexander had become rather notorious for his rather peculiar hairstyle. The pig-tails had almost become his trade-mark. But alas the pig-tails just had to go following an appearance by the Looney Viscount on television. For some reason, following the appearance, Alexander received dozens of letters ridiculing him and his Davy Crockett hair-do (is this any way to treat one of our betters?). Feeling rather self-concious the Loon got his children's nanny to chop it all off. Rumours that he has become the first aristocratic skinhead boot-boy appear to be untrue.

Meanwhile, the Looney Viscount was holidaying at his St Tropez retreat with his Chinese artist girlfriend Chung Yee Chong (these aristocrats only go for women with better breeding you know) when she was arrested for not having the right documents. She was sent home and will join Alexander later.

ADVANCING ON NOTTING HILL

A NEW board game called National Front, described by its manufacturers as "the game of racial discord", has caused some consternation in Community Relations circles.

The game – which is played on a board mapped out with the Immigrant areas of London – has been on sale in two Ipswich shops. Now the town's angry (and humourless) Community Relations Council has demanded that it be withdrawn from sale.

The game involves players taking the parts of the National Front, the Blacks and the police, with points awarded to each based on make believe fighting, rioting and looting.

The Black player is advised "looting, attacking policemen and the SPG will be beneficial". Another big points winner for the Black player is to engage in "granny bashing".

The police player "must arrest enough people to show that justice has been done". Extra points can be collected by "attacking Blair Peach and injuring children and the disabled".

The NF player does not have so many options; he is simply advised to concentrate on "causing havoc and bashing Blacks".

Ms. Nancy Jaeger of Ipswich Community Relations Council is not amused. She described the game as being in "poor taste" and demanded that it be banned.

FOOD OF THE GODS

A Delhi Court recently ruled that Hindu Gods can have a quick puff on a fag, wear specs and stammer.

An Indian High Court judge ruled that a film showing the Demon King Ravana smoking a well-known brand of cheap Indian cigarette, the God Rama's divine girlfriend Laxmana stuttering, and the Monkey God Sugriva wearing spectacles was "not offensive" to the Hindu religion and would be allowed to be shown.

No doubt we can now expect further cinematic offerings – perhaps adverts aimed at "ethnic minorities" over here showing the God Indra (the Hindu equivalent of Thor) downing a pint of Watney's Special, the fertility God Siva opening a bag of Fison's fertilizer and the Lord Krishna tucking into a good old spread at Ramjam Singh's Tandoori Fried Chicken Emporium in the Balls Pond Road...

BOOK REVIEW

EVEN THE DEAD WERE KILLED – A true story of the Holocaust by Solly Goldburg. Reviewed by Lenny Finkelstein.

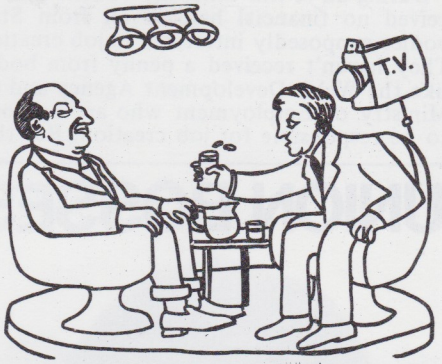
That Solly felt unable to write of his experiences in Auschwitz until nearly forty years later, is testament to the amount of suffering he has endured. Not until now has he been able to compose himself sufficiently to leave his chain of specialist adult bookshops and reveal it all. Now, at last, we can read his own, incredible tale.

I personally doubt that there is a person living who would not be moved by this story. We read of millions of Jews who were herded to the gas chambers, in order to collect what the Germans said was "disinfected clothing". Others, who fell sick, were taken to the camp hospital, where sinister experiments were carried out in order "to make them better". Many were put onto trains never to be seen again.

And then there is Solly's own story. With the aid of photographs and diagrams, he explains how he was repeatedly beaten by the evil vixens of the S.S. Sometimes the treatment was so bad that he died. But yet, with that remarkable quality of endurance that the Jews have, he survived. He survived being gassed five times, being shot eight times and being hung three times. He even survived being blown to bits.

As if this tale of horror was not enough, Solly has also revealed the last Nazi secret. According to his records, so secret that only Hitler knew apart from himself, the Germans had invented the ball-point pen at Auschwitz, and were exporting them to attics in Holland.

All in all, a most impressive addition to books dealing with the death of 50 million Jews in World War Two. C.B.S. television in America have plans to turn Solly's book into a soap opera.



How about a glass of water Mr. Goldburg, to wash down that incredible pack of lies?

SWEET AND SOUR

A Chinaman living at a takeaway in Bridgewater, Somerset, was fined £25 after he launched a kung-fu attack on a driving test examiner who failed him. Jimmy Ying Kwong Chau said he kicked the examiner because he felt the test was "unfair". He added "I hope my lapse will not affect my determination to become a solicitor".

A WORKERS' CO-OPERATIVE IN ACTION

FOR TWO YEARS, up until August last year, 42 women worked for a small textiles firm called Jon's Fashions in Bargoed, South Wales. Then, on August 14, they were told that Jon's Fashions were closing down. It sounds like the all too familiar story of a small firm closing down, just another victim of the current recession.

However, there was one big difference between the employees of Jon's Fashions and the hundreds of thousands of others who have since joined the ever lengthening dole queues up and down the country. Faced with the blunt fact that they were out of a job, the women held a meeting and decided to set up the Bargoed Blouse Workers' Co-operative. They elected officers: Audrey Helps as chairman; Barbara Hurley, secretary Jane Rogers, treasurer, and Joyce Shutt as minutes secretary.

When it came to the crunch, 17 of the 42 each put £50 into a Co-op bank account, determined, as one of the women put it, to "make ourselves a winner".

They asked Mid Glamorgan's Rhymney Valley district council to let them use the premises, and they leased new machines.

In cautious style they didn't pay themselves any wages for the first three weeks, just so that the newly-formed co-operative could get off the ground. But fairly quickly they worked up to the same wages as they were getting before Jon's Fashions closed down.

The women now work to meet the 1,000 plus blouses a week deadline for their customers.

During all of this time, the women have received no financial help at all from State bodies supposedly interested in job creation. They haven't received a penny from bodies like the Welsh Development Agency and the Ministry of Employment who are supposed to be responsible for job creation. But then the Bargoed Workers' Co-operative didn't need any help – they have done their own job creation!

In fact, the Co-op is now expanding. They have taken on two young women under the Youth Opportunities Programme and they have also taken on eight other women who used to work for Jon's Fashions. Furthermore, the women have bought some cutting equipment so that they can buy and cut material to their own patterns. This will lead to better pay and more jobs.

There's no doubt that, while everyone has joined to form the Workers' Co-operative because there were no jobs to be had, they've quickly got to enjoy living without the boss.

"We've had to work harder, but it's different when you're doing it for yourselves," says Ann Richards.

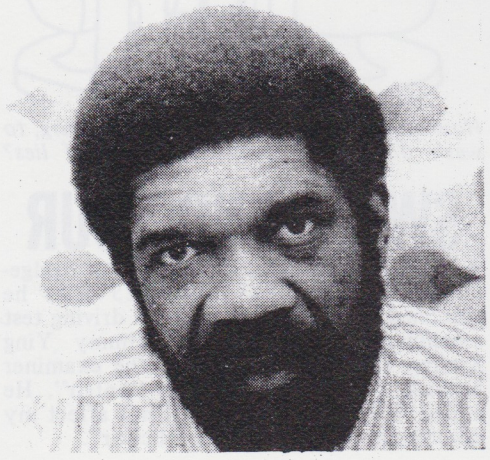
"One day we'll be doing it all ourselves – making it all and selling it. We'll be doing our own cutting and designs. Then there'll be no middle man taking the cream."

Without doubt there is a lesson to learn from the women at the Bargoed Blouse Workers' Co-operative. They have shown that the workers themselves can take over their places of employment and make a success of it – even at a time of recession when hundreds of other firms are going bankrupt.

The women at the Bargoed Workers' Co-operative have set an example which other workers, rather than face redundancy, would do well to follow. But one or two workers' co-ops scattered amidst a generally corrupt and decaying capitalist economic system will not solve the problems which face British workers. The only answer is the destruction of the present capitalist economic system and the building in its place of a new economic system whereby ALL the workers have a share in the ownership of the industry in which they work. A system where the workers' co-op is not so much the exception as the rule!

THE BARGOED WORKERS' CO-OPERATIVE.

UNION BOSSES HELP BLACKS



TRADE UNION BOSSES have issued a special charter for Blacks entitled Black Workers. This charter, according to Ken Gill the chairman of the TUC's equal rights committee, is designed specifically to help Blacks. In particular it deals with the recruitment of more Blacks to the trade union movement and with the need to combat racism.

Not surprisingly this charter is welcomed by leading Black trade unionists like Bill Morris (pictured left) who says that there has been a vast improvement in recent years in TUC attitudes towards racism and the difficulties encountered by Black workers.

Needless to say, any improvement in the position of Black workers is only achieved at the expense of the White workers whose jobs and positions they take over.

Foreign Imports - Controls Needed

DURING 1980 imported cars took a record 56.7% of the British automobile market.

The Japanese sold more than 160,000 cars and captured 11.9% of total sales. This was a substantial increase over the previous year.

The multi-national conglomerate, Ford, increased its market share to some 30.7%.

Although British Leyland launched the Mini Metro, the company sold 60,000 fewer cars than in 1979 and captured only 18.2% of total sales.

These disastrous figures underline the desperate need for import controls if what remains of the British car industry is to survive and prosper.

A LOOK AT THE LATEST READING

THE CAMP OF THE SAINTS by Jean Raspail.

Jean Raspail, a major French novelist, has written what must be the ultimate horror story – a highly gripping account of the destruction of the White race.

Raspail has addressed this topic, a fear which lurks in the mind of every racially conscious White person, in a manner so compelling that a major publishing company could not resist the temptation to print the English version.

The Camp of the Saints is written in a highly readable style. The plot is likewise very simple.

Set in the future, the book tells of the "peaceful" (that is, non-military) invasion of France by a horde of one million mud mongrels from the banks of the River Ganges.

The French people, their minds poisoned by liberalism, their will power weakened by decades of easy living, and governed by short-sighted political leaders, succumb to the invasion with virtually no resistance.

The rest of the White world, nearly all of which is as internally rotten as France, quickly follows suit.

Within this stark outline, Raspail chronicles the invasion. He masterfully describes a wide variety of individuals – the good, the bad and the ugly – and shows how this tragedy of cosmic proportions affects them.

Although he deals extensively with the basic racial problems confronting the world in a clear-minded and thoroughly Racial Nationalist manner, the author is notably lacking in the matter of an equally crucial issue: the Jewish question.

Perhaps omitting any serious criticism of the Jews is the price he had to pay for getting the book published by a major firm.

(It should also be noted that the book was translated from the French into English by a Jew, Norman Shapiro, again perhaps to assure the Jews that he is not anti–Semitic.)

Raspail's language is powerful, and he uses it well. The book will undoubtedly frighten and horrify some readers.

In places it is amusing and light. In others it is heartbreaking.

No one, however, will be left unmoved by this epic saga of the fictional passing of the White race.

The Camp of the Saints is the perfect book for someone who is already a racialist, or for someone you are trying to convert.

SAVE THE FAMILY FARM!

BY JOHN FIELD

NO GROUP in Britain has worked harder or contributed more to the real wealth and happiness of our society than the nation's farmers. Yet no one has been more shabbily treated in recent times than this self same group.

The rise in food prices at the supermarket check-out counter has not meant prosperity for the farmer. Quite the opposite. Not only has real farm income dropped, but more and more family farmers – who once comprised the backbone of British society – have been, and are being, forced from the land.

Like the consumers and every productive element of society, the farmer has become a victim of the liberal-capitalist system.

While the middlemen – represented by the big wholesalers, processors, commodity speculators and international tycoons – have enriched themselves royally in the last two or three decades, the farmer has been driven to the wall.

As the big speculators and corporate giants have squeezed out the small family farmer, the argument has been advanced that food can be more efficiently raised by large plutocratic interests than by small landholders. But this completely materialistic line overlooks the fact that farming is more than an economic proposition.

The family farm is an important way of life that must be revived and preserved at all costs if the White race itself is to have a future.

No part of our society is closer to the earth, and thereby to Nature itself, than the farming community.

At a time when our people have increasingly lost their ancient contact with the soil and with the natural order, and when many people – especially the young – regard supermarket shelves and chemical processing plants as the source of their daily bread, the role of the family farmer assumes new importance as a barrier of natural living against the encroachment of an artificial, plastic world.

Finally, it must be firmly understood that no section of Britain's community is racially more healthy than its White farmers and their families.

This is a priceless genetic treasure which must not be depleted, but nurtured and increased.

Accordingly, let us raise the demand that the rights of the farmers as an equal and worthy member of our community be restored – along with those of the ordinary British worker and small businessman, and every other productive segment of society.

Let the farmer be guaranteed a market for all he can produce at a good and decent price. Let his labours be further rewarded by allowing him to share – with the consumer – in any profits from the food distribution process.

At the same time, let the parasitic world of the speculator, the profiteer, the swindler, and the absentee owner be eliminated.

Let the power of big business and capitalist greed be completely and thoroughly demolished.

In its stead, let there arise the edifice of a new order, which will accord economic and social justice in a racial community of White brothers and sisters.
